DTL announce new subsidiary in North America

In the latest of a number of expansion initiatives, Damper Technology Ltd (DTL) is pleased to announce the incorporation of a new subsidiary in North America.

Damper Technology Canada is based within the Orbinox Canada site in Laval, Quebec and has been established to serve the North American market for both domestic installations and global projects. DTL offers a diverse range of industrial dampers for many applications within the Power Generation, Petrochem, Oil & Gas and General Industrial sectors. DTL's manufacturing facilities in the UK and India will help North American customers execute overseas projects by providing high quality and reliable damper products while leveraging regional manufacturing costs.

The operation in Canada is supported by the DTL Head Office in the UK, and enjoys the support and existing infrastructure of Orbinox Canada. Joe D'Angelo, CEO of Orbinox Canada commented: "This is an exciting opportunity for both DTL and Orbinox – our group companies have a shared ethos of collaboration and mutual support for continued growth and expansion into markets that will undoubtedly benefit from the products and services we are proud to offer on a global scale. DTL has an extremely good reputation in the damper market and I have no doubt that their organisation and expertise will add value for customers here in North America".

DTL was established in 2001 and has a background in the Damper Industry dating back to 1965. Since conception DTL has continued to build on a growing worldwide reputation for quality, innovation, product reliability and cost effectiveness, becoming one of the world leaders in the Damper Market Place.
